Demographic Paper for the Human Resources Commission

By George Hagenauer, Member

There has been a lot of discussion within the city government about Race and Equity. At the last meeting we talked briefly about what the Commission's role might be in addressing that issue.

As the first step I decided it might be good to look at the census data to develop a picture of Ypsilanti's racial and ethnic demographics. That was a bit more complicated than I thought- not only due to the reformatting of the website since I last used it several years ago but also because the numbers shifted depending on how the data was being analyzed. Differences came up between queries done in different parts of the census website or local governmental interpretations of the data.

On the next page is probably the best chart I found showing the data and how it changed from 2010. A lot of the change is due to giving people additional choices in terms of describing their ethnicity. Using other data, I found that about 441 of the people listed as multi-racial were identified as two race black. Adding that group to the Black demographic drops the negative percent change from 2010 to about 2.5%. Many of the others were Asian and that deficit completely disappears as a result. There were also twice as many Native American in the two or more races category than there were identifying solely as Native American.

Race and Hispanic Origin

Race and Hispanic Origin	Census 2010	Percent of Population 2010	Census 2020	Percent of Population 2020	Percentage Point Change 2010-2020
Non-Hispanic	18,677	96.1%	19,332	93.6%	-2.5%
White	11,543	59.4%	12,263	59.4%	0%
Black	5,596	28.8%	4,856	23.5%	-5.3%
Asian	653	3.4%	652	3.2%	-0.2%
Multi-Racial	740	3.8%	1,292	6.3%	2.4%
Other	145	0.7%	269	1.3%	0.6%
Hispanic	758	3.9%	1,316	6.4%	2.5%
Total	19,435	100%	20,648	100%	0%

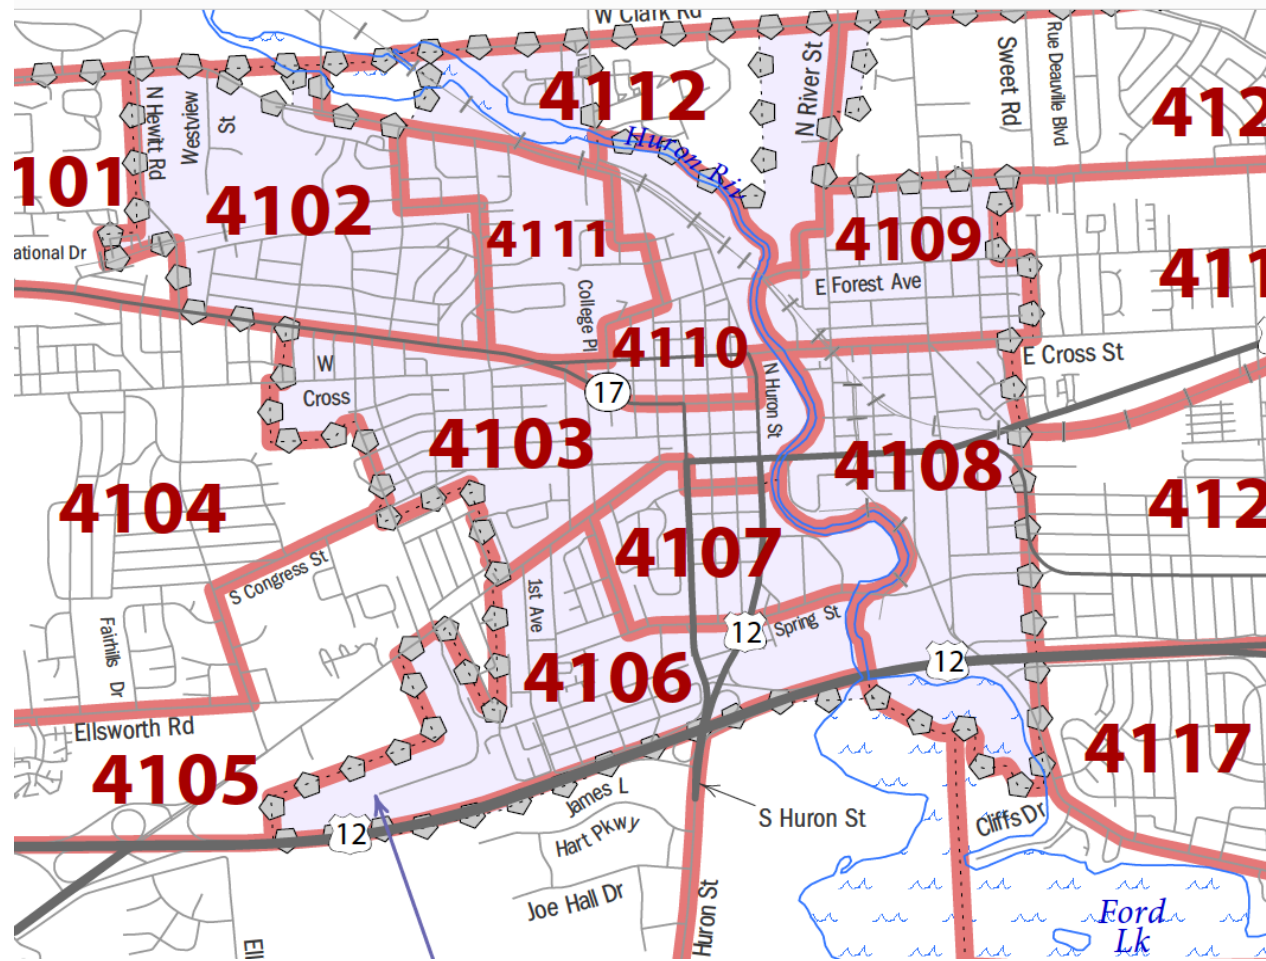

Here is how it looks without Hispanics being factored out. Some analysts point out that Hispanics technically are an ethnicity not a race.

Total: 2020	20648	100%
Population of one race:	18912	91.6%
White alone	12619	61.1%
Black or African American alone	4926	23.9%
American Indian and Alaska Native alone	113	0.5%
Asian alone	657	3.2%
Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islander alone	40	0.2%
Some Other Race alone	557	2.7%
Population of two or more races:	1736	8.4%

I next looked at How race was distributed geographically within the city. To do that I looked at census tract data. One quirk of the was that data was not available for tract 4111 which is predominately EMU. The missing tract accounts for the differences in percentages.

Here is a map of Ypsi's census tracts

Here are the census tracts with the percentages of each race in them. While this shows a higher level of integration than any place I have lived in my life – quite often the tracts cover multiple defined neighborhoods with ethnic or racial clustering varying in each though every area I think has a mix of ethnicities – the densities just vary by neighborhoods which usually are smaller than the census tract. A census block analysis would probably show more segregated housing.

This gives a picture of racial diversity in Ypsilanti. Looking at the city budget and other materials. Most of the budget is standard basic services – so equity there could be analyzed geographically are expenditures distributed equitably throughout the city. I have started to explore crime data but have not found any ethnic data there yet. Likewise, there may not be key data on two major equity indicators staff and vendors. The one area I was able to check was elected officials which at the council level are 42% white 57% black and at the state and county level are both African Americans.

The more critical data may be economic as the differences there racially are pretty profound. I'll try to pull that work for the next meeting.

Meanwhile the next page is a rather interesting housing insight that came from looking at the census data and with implications on how the city approaches housing issues.

To City Council Members:

From George Hagenauer 309 N. Grove St. Ypsilanti

Please forward this letter to the Planning Commission, since I can't do that directly; it might also be helpful you in planning for the year.

I have been looking at the 2020 census data, working to put together an overview report for the Human Resources Commission.

- I noticed that 2955 (a little over 14% of our population) of the people housed in the city are housed in EMU housing. While that is only about 22% of EMU's 13,572 students that year – it is nonetheless a significant portion of Ypsilanti's population.
- As anyone who has done doors for any reason in the city knows, students are renting in various parts of the city.
- Looking at the poverty figures, I see that 2530 are between the ages of 18 and 25, which is about 44% of the people in poverty in the city.
- I remember seeing a survey done in the city by a local housing group that showed a lot of need among younger adults.

My current insights are limited as I am still learning how to do cross referencing with the data. However, the above suggests that decisions made by EMU have a considerable impact on the state of housing and especially affordable housing in the city. If EMU campus housing became more affordable and attractive to students, rental space might open up to more non-students in city housing.

- We know that EMU is currently looking to privatize their housing and that EMU is probably expanding the amount of online courses – possibly reducing the need for students to live on campus.
- There are some interesting models like the large Ann Arbor coop system that while serving students are also open to non-students – usually in their 20's; and which provide an affordable housing option.

These facts suggest a need for increased coordination between the city (City Council and Planning Commission) and EMU. Coordination could involve periodic presentations by EMU to both bodies (and thus the public). Another option could be a designated EMU position on the Planning Commission.
